IMPERIAL DEFENSE FORCES AND AXIS ARMORED UNITS ARE LOCKED IN BATTLE OVER WIDE AREA OF EGYPTIAN DESERT; BRITISH ON NORTHERN SECTOR CONDUCT SUCCESSFUL RAID

At Least Two Large Formations of Nazi Stuka Dive-Bombers Are Attacked by Defending Fighter Planes and Are Forced To Jettison Bombs Before Reaching Their Objective

(By International News Service)
CAIRO, Sept. 2—Imperial defense forces and Axis armored units are locked in battle over a wide area extending from El Ruweisat ridge south to Qaret El Himeimat in the Egyptian Desert, the British Middle East command announced today.
It was disclosed at the same time that British forces on the northern sector of the 35-mile El Alamein defense line had made a successful raid and captured a number of Germans.
Royal Air Force planes and American bombers, the communiqué said, were engaged in "intensive and accurate" attacks against Axis troop concentrations and air forces.
It was revealed that at least two large formations of Nazi Stuka dive-bombers had been attacked by defending fighter planes and forced to jettison their bombs before they reached their objectives.
At least six German bombers and five fighters were destroyed in one aerial duel, the Middle East high command said.

The communiqué said that British long-range fighters on the other hand had successfully attacked an Axis transport along the coastal road between Gambut and Sidi Barrani.
Heavy assaults were made in the battle area by United States, R. A. F. and South African Air Force bombers, assisted by naval aircraft.
Landing grounds between Mersa Matruh and El Daba also were heavily bombed despite severe sand storms, it was announced.

LONDON, Sept. 2—A blistering night raid by hundreds of bombers upon the German industrial city of Saarbrücken was followed today by a new series of attacks against Nazi-occupied France by British and American fighter and bombing planes.

THE WAR AT A GLANCE

By International News Service
"Watch Siberia! and the Aleutians!" That was the warning today as evidence piled up that the busy Japanese were planning a new spectacular offensive somewhere on the far-flung battle front.
Military circles in Washington are convinced the Japanese war lords are going to scrap the neutrality pact, with the Soviets and strike against their eastern maritime provinces.
This conviction grew today following the resignation of foreign minister Shigenori Togo, the only non-militarist in the Japanese cabinet and negotiator of the Russian treaty.
Further signs of Japan's intentions were the recent withdrawal of her troops from vital Chinese areas and Chungking reports that reinforcements have been massed along the Siberian border.
It has been the general belief that Japan's "stab in the back" against Russia awaited only marked German successes on the Soviet front.
This situation appeared to be developing today as Moscow admitted the Nazi mechanized hordes had scored another threatening breakthrough on the Stalingrad front, southwest of the Volga manufacturing center.
Stockholm reported that German spearheads had driven to the Volga northeast of Stalingrad and were within 12 miles of the city.
There was no confirmation of this report in Moscow, but it was admitted that the German panzer divisions are exerting great pressure on the Red armies defending the Volga line.
Elsewhere the Soviet lines were reported to be holding firmly against all enemy assaults while the Russian counter-offensive moved ahead on the Kalinin front northwest of Moscow.
Heavy fighting was reported on the New Guinea front. Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported Japanese pressure on the Kokoda front, midway between Port Moresby and the Japanese bases in the Buna-Gona area, was increasing.
The RAF was over Germany during the night and the Air Ministry announced that Saarbrücken was heavily raided. Coastal observers reported that waves of bombers soared over the channel at midnight and that the first formations returned around 3 a. m. Berlin admitted "small numbers" of raiders were over western Germany and claimed to have shot down three bombers.
The battle for Alexandria and Suez continued in the Egyptian desert. An official British communiqué declared the situation was "well in hand."

GENEVIEVE SMITH WILL SERVE AS A PRINCIPAL

At South Langhorne School When Sessions Open On September 9th

SUCCEEDS MR. HAMMOND

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Sept. 2—Miss Genevieve Smith will serve as principal of South Langhorne public schools, when sessions open on the ninth of September.
Miss Smith will also be in charge of grades seven and eight.
Miss Smith comes to South Langhorne with several years of educational experience and formerly made her home at Ambler. She replaces Merle P. Hammond, who had been in charge of education affairs in South Langhorne for 13 years prior to his resignation in June to take up active agriculture work on his two 250-acre farms in Franklin County, Pennsylvania.
South Langhorne school officials disclosed that they will not be faced with the problems other schools are in—a shortage of fuel oil for heating. The South Langhorne School is heated by coal and the supply on hand is more than adequate to carry through the present winter with a balance to start the following season.
One teacher, the former Miss Marian Johnson, was married during the summer.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

The Bad Loser

Washington, Sept. 1.
IN politics, as in all the other struggles and diversions of life, either a man takes his licks well or he does not. If Mr. Roosevelt has taken his recent defeat in New York well, there is nothing in the record to show it—quite the contrary.
IF THE RESULT had been reversed and Mr. Farley been the beaten man no one will doubt what would have followed. Within an hour he would have sent a congratulatory telegram to the President and also one to Senator Meade, the President's candidate, promising him every possible support. Moreover, he would have lived up to it. But, has Mr. Roosevelt congratulated Mr. Farley and has he wished Mr. Bennett success?

IF THIS IS sportsmanship; if this is playing the game; if this is the spirit of our democratic system, then words have lost their meaning and it is useless to talk of moral obligations or ethical standards in politics or government. Although both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. LaGuardia ultimately will support Mr. Bennett, because they will support Mr. Bennett, they have no real alternative; their present attitude

To Call All Single Men First in Army Draft

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2—A broad new policy that will tend to eliminate the calling of married men from the draft district while another has plenty of single men available was announced today by Major General Lewis B. Hershey, Director of Selective Service.
State draft directors were ordered to apportion their calls in such a way that local boards having large numbers of single men will have to bear the greater part of the burden for the time being. Large reservoirs of single men will be tapped and drained off first.
Meanwhile, every draft board in the Nation was put under specific instructions to complete the initial classification of all men registered and liable for military service (20 to 46) by October 16, if not sooner. The reason was brief: the military situation is serious.
So serious, in fact, Senator Charles McNary (R., S. D.), a member of the Military Affairs Committee, said he would introduce a bill on Thursday to extend the draft to include 18 and 19 year olds. The Army has long contended that these young men make the best fighting troops.
"The time has come," Gurney declared. "Younger men should be given a chance to get the proper kind of training, so that when they go into action, they will have a chance to come through. We don't want to send men into combat as we did in the last war, with very little training—some with only a few weeks of it."
Hershey's broad directive is the biggest step yet taken to give effect to the order of deferment laid down by Congress in the allowance and allotment law. That law makes provision for service men's dependents and at the same time seeks to preserve the family as long as possible.

BENSALEM SCHOOLS WILL OPEN SESSIONS ON SEPTEMBER 9TH

Full-Day Sessions Are To Be Held Beginning At 8.50 A. M.

SAME BUS SCHEDULE

Pupils Must Live More Than 1 1/2 Miles Away To Be Transported

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Sept. 2—Bensalem Township public schools will open on Wednesday, September 9th, with full sessions beginning at 8.50 a. m.

A meeting of the teachers is scheduled for Tuesday evening, September 8th, at 7.30 in the high school building here.
Buses will follow the same schedule as last term, it is stated. There is anticipated greatly increased enrollment from various sections, necessitating curtailed services in Andalusia and at Taylor avenue stops.

Transportation will be provided all students, grades one through eight, living over 1 1/2 miles from the assigned schools. Students of grades nine to 12 living over two miles from school (mileage measured by nearest public highway to closest spot on school site). By such legal criterion all pupils at Taylor avenue live within the walking limit, but children grades one through four, will be transported by bus since there is room for that number. From Andalusia school only pupils from seventh and eighth grades will be transported because this loads the bus to capacity.

Parents' Responsibility Stressed in Youth Crime

ANDALUSIA, Sept. 2—Anthony Russo, Bucks County detective, in addressing members of Bensalem Rotary Club here last evening made a statement that "Crime is definitely on the increase as it was during the last war." He added however that "Following the present war we can expect another wave of crime."

The detective claimed that 95 per cent of children who get into crime could be prevented from taking that track if their parents would assume more responsibility. He made a point of the fact that too many girls attend public dances and enter taprooms unescorted, stating this is a great factor in crime. "Crime roots are frequently at such sources," he added.
Mr. Russo urged that boys of 13, 14 and 15 years be definitely encouraged to enter church and Sunday School work, take an interest in civic and community enterprises, and in good biographies. "Too often they run loose while their parents are at their clubs or other places."

A number of case studies were presented to the Rotarians.
In another phase of his address Mr. Russo asked that individuals do all possible in identifying criminals. A plea was made for the public to play a part in spotting clues in saboteur cases, reporting same to the authorities. "It is necessary that all be on the alert and ready to report anything having a bearing on such cases," he added, as he emphasized that the war will be won just as much on the home front as on the battle-front.

KEEP THEM MARCHING

Napoleon's (it was Napoleon, wasn't it?) bright remark about an army's marching on its stomach has served to distract attention from the prosaic fact that feet still have a function in getting a soldier from one place to another. They also help in offices and factories, whether they stand all day or move about.

This consideration has led the Podiatry Society of the State of New York to urge that podiatrists be included on the staffs of defense industries and be commissioned as officers in the Army Medical Corps. The Navy has forty-two podiatrists with the rank of ensign, while the Army hasn't a single one. Regular medics have to care for the feet of the infantry.

The Podiatry Society estimates that one out of every eleven men in the armed forces of the United States has defective feet—and about 50 per cent of all civilians. Despite the mechanization of many Army branches, foot troubles reduce efficiency almost as much as they ever did. Weak arches, bunions, and other defects can interfere seriously with a soldier's training and later with his fighting. In such cases, even dodging bullets will hardly keep a man's mind off his feet.

The podiatrists allege that they have 1,200 experts available for immediate service, and they argue that as 13 per cent of the time lost through injuries in industry is due to foot injuries, podiatrists should have a regular status both in the Army and in industry. It does seem that establishment of a podiatric corps in the Army would relieve physicians of the Medical Corps from more urgent duties, especially if there is a shortage of doctors in the armed forces.

BLOOD DONATIONS

The main purpose of the art of warfare is the destruction of the enemy, but a vital contribution to the achievement of this purpose is the conservation of American personnel. And nothing in modern times has contributed more to the saving of lives and the returning of the wounded to active combat than emergency blood transfusions to alleviate shock and enable healing methods to work for recovery.

These transfusions by the blood plasma method, and another method of recent development, are the concern of the American Red Cross. It inaugurated the plan of receiving donations from patriotic people and has been remarkably successful.

The Army and the Navy have now called upon the Red Cross to expand its facilities so that it can receive 2,500,000 pints of blood during the next twelve months. This calls for more than doubling the present acquisition rate. The Red Cross is prepared to respond to the call. The only uncertain factor in the process is the public response.

Now that more than 500,000 people have donated, and found from their own experience that this is one sure way that they can help the men at the front without hardship to themselves, the response should be in keeping with the needs of the armed forces and the facilities of the Red Cross.

Thus far no East Coast resort has offered reserved seats for guests who wish to watch the battles between the submarines and the bombers.

The other World War started twenty-eight years ago, or was it the beginning of this one.

is, designed to do him damage—and well they know it. And whom does it help? It helps, of course, Mr. Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican candidate for Governor. And in helping Mr. Dewey the President makes a mockery of his own words, rejects his own thesis and

Try Triangles Today

By Frances Lee Barton

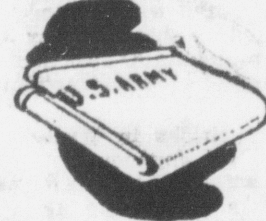

Are you darning and worrying around the kitchen scurrying. A wondering and a pondering. About what to serve tonight? Cease your darning and your worrying. Here's a recipe entrancing. Try it and both guests and family will approve with all their might.

Crusty Fruit Triangles
2 cups sifted cake flour; 2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder; 1/2 teaspoon salt; 1/2 cup shortening; 1 1/2 teaspoons grated orange rind; 1/2 cup seedless raisins; 2 tablespoons dark corn syrup; 1/2 cup milk.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cut in shortening; add orange rind and raisins. Combine corn syrup and milk. Add all at once to flour mixture and stir carefully until all flour is dampened. Then stir vigorously until mixture forms a stiff dough and follows spoon around bowl. Turn out immediately on lightly floured board and knead 30 seconds. Roll 1/4 inch thick and cut in triangles. Place on ungreased baking sheet. Brush tops lightly with corn syrup. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) 12 to 15 minutes or until browned. Make about 15 triangles.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

Uncle Sam takes good care of his soldiers. Included in the issue to each man is two woolen blankets. Specifications say these blankets must be olive drab, must contain at least 65 percent virgin wool, the rest in worked-over wool. They cost $6.85 each or $13.70 for the pair for each man.

So a $25 War Bond for which you pay only $18.75 will buy almost three of these wool blankets for American soldiers. There are some cotton blankets which are used in tropical climates which cost $2, but all our boys need these wool blankets. You can buy them with your purchase of War Bonds. Invest at least ten percent of your pay every pay day. Get War Bonds from your Bank, Postoffice or other issuing agency. U. S. Treasury Department repudiates the entire Administration political propaganda, which is that no one should be elected to public office this fall who was not in accord with the Roosevelt foreign policy before Pearl Harbor, because only those who were can be trusted. Now, while no one disparages Mr. Dewey's patriotism, he certainly was classed as an isolationist before we went to war and was as much opposed to the Roosevelt foreign policy as to his domestic policies. And there is not a New Dealer in the country who would call him a "liberal."

YET, HERE WE find the President deliberately—because it is impossible to think he does not know what he is doing—aiding the man who opposes everything for which he stands as against a man whose record meets every test he has proposed. Aside from the decency of the thing it is stupid to be so poor a loser. It is certainly not smart to let personal disappointment and hurt pride endanger the large objectives to which the President is committed in so great a national emergency. That seems to be what he is doing. True, his defeat was a bitter dose for Mr. Roosevelt but he is not doing himself much good by the way he is taking it. Moreover, if—and the chances seem good that he will—Mr. Farley elects his candidate without Mr. Roosevelt's aid, then Mr. Roosevelt will have suffered another defeat and Mr. Farley's position as the outstanding Democratic politician in the country be tremendously buttressed. Even if Mr. Bennett should not win, Mr. Farley's position inside the

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

THE new crop of seedless white grapes is now in market and in combination with apples, avocados or peaches make a particularly delicious salad. If one wants to put an extra frill on Sunday dinner a salad made with halves of pears or avocados coated with cream cheese and then studded with halves of seedless white grapes is as delicious as it is decorative.

Other varieties of grapes are also coming in more abundantly and are fine for jellies, preserves and conserves. The supply of apples is steadily increasing and now that cooler weather is just around the corner the family probably will enjoy pastry desserts.

Fowl is plentiful this week as is lamb, and both are of choice quality. There are also plenty of broilers and fryers in market and it is a rare family which won't welcome fried chicken once a week.

To help with the planning of Sunday dinner, Vivian Whaley, director of the A & P Kitchen, suggests the following menus for three different budgets:

Low Cost Dinner

Lamb Patties with Brown Gravy
Baked Stuffed Potatoes
Mashed Carrots
Enriched Bread
Apple Tapioca with Custard Sauce
Iced Tea

Medium Cost Dinner

Stuffed Shoulder of Veal
Steamed Yellow Squash
Frenched String Beans
Cola Slaw
Enriched Bread
Fresh Fruit Gelatin with Custard Sauce
Iced Coffee

Very Special Dinner

Cream of Fresh Corn Soup
Broiled Chicken
Baked Stuffed Eggplant
New Green Peas
Grape and Apple Salad
Hot Corn Sticks
Cream Cheese with Jelly and Crackers

Pilgrim in MANHATTAN by MARGARET BELL HOUSTON

SYNOPSIS

Chloe Cameron had come to the Samuels' Bureau of Entertainment in search of work as an entertainer. Instead, she became secretary at the Bureau under a Miss Jepson, hoping that some day she may have an opportunity to substitute for some artist and sing her own cowboy and Indian songs. One Saturday forenoon, Chloe, alone in the office, is revising her rejected book, "Songs of the Trail," when Rann Sturgis, handsome lawyer, comes in to arrange some special entertainment for a Society party. When he turns down all the Bureau's possibilities, she offers her own specialties without mentioning herself. He leaves saying that what she offered wouldn't be suitable for this particular occasion but he may be able to use the "Jack Rabbit Girl" (one of her own numbers) later. It is Chloe's birthday and, on the way home, she stops at a bakery for a cake. Her thoughts go back to last year's celebration in her little home town of Wahilla, Oklahoma. After her mother's death, there was no staying on in her old home. She might have married Nate Barlow, the town's banker, but Chloe was ambitious and wanted a career.

CHAPTER THREE

So the house was rented. New people, a bride and groom, had taken it. He was an oil driller in charge of a wild-cat well just outside Wahilla. They had taken it furnished except for a few things Chloe had kept for herself, some books and silver and linen, pieces of pottery and glass, and the banjo clock and copper luster bowl that had come with her mother from Tennessee.

Nate Barlow had found her tenants for her. Nate was thirty-seven, his sandy hair already a little thin in front. But he was a good-looking man, nobody could deny that. And he was solid and careful, as became the president of the only bank in town.

He had found her the tenants, though he disapproved of her going. On the last night she was in Wahilla, staying with Rose Emily Robins, her dearest friend, Nate walked with Chloe in Rose Emily's garden. It was a wonderful old garden, fragrant and shadowy, with a rose arbor and a moon in the tops of the locust trees. Nate had talked urgently.

"I've loved you a long time, Chloe. Ever since the day I got into Wahilla from Tulsa to take charge of the bank, and saw you riding to school on your pony. You were only fourteen then, and your hair was flying, and you smiled at me as you went by. I was feeling pretty low in those days, but we won't go into that."

He didn't need to. Wahilla had heard before he arrived. On the eve of his wedding the bride had capriciously run away with somebody else. The blow had been too much for Nate and he had left Tulsa.

"You couldn't have loved me all of a sudden like that—feeling so low and all," said Chloe.

"Maybe not. And you were nothing but a kid. Still, it did something to me when you flashed by. Your smile was so full of what the French call camaraderie."

"I nearly ran over you," she said.

That was why she had smiled at course so abruptly. People in Wahilla knew enough to keep out of her way when she was late for school. "But you smiled," he answered. "And I watched you grow up. It didn't take you long. The night the College Theater gave the play you wrote—what was its name?" "If I Were Queen," she said. Ah, what a night! But she had heard this tale before.

"You wrote it and you acted in it. You were lovely, Chloe. That was the night I knew you were grown-up. You kissed me after it was over."

"Did I?" she asked. This was news.

"Didn't you know?" Well, she had kissed so many. What with the appleauce and the flowers and all. She had fallen in love herself that night. Not necessarily with the stage, but certain-always. I wish that I could be that man right now."

Chloe answered, "I wish so, too." And she meant it.

"If I could make you sorry for me," said Nate.

She looked at him. "Pity isn't love," she said sternly.

"Well, anyhow, don't forget me. . . . And write to me, Chloe—please. And call on me if you ever need help. Help of any kind."

She had promised, and she had kissed him, there in the moonlight.

When Chloe left Wahilla, everybody had come to the train, the grown-ups and the youngsters and the cowboys, and Chinese Gus and Rose Emily and the crowd, and fat black Odella who had taught Chloe to cook. And old Stomachache, the Indian, leaning on his hackberry stick.

When Chloe left Wahilla, everybody had come to the train.

ly with success, and the idea of a bigger world than Wahilla. The lyrics that she had written and sung. . . . The gay little lyrics of If I Were Queen. . . . They were worth using again some time. They would make a program in themselves. . . . "Your mother liked me," Nate said gently, walking with her in Rose Emily's garden. "Do you love any one else, Chloe?"

"Several," said Chloe. "All about the same."

"I guess I'm too old for you," said Nate.

"It's not that," she assured him. "I never think about anybody's age."

And they strolled on under the magnetic Oklahoma moon. Then Nate had said, "You could love some one very much, Chloe. Several, you say. You love several now. Some day you will love just one. You will love him in spite of difference in age, or of any other obstacle, if that's an obstacle. You will love him in spite of reason or common sense, or whatever else you'd rather Somebody presented her with a little typewriter in the name of them all. It was Taps Kennedy from the Court House. She couldn't see him, for the tears in her eyes, but she knew his voice when he began his speech—about the stories she was going to write for all the world to read, and the songs she was going to sing for people to hear, and how proud Wahilla was going to be of her—if it could be any prouder than it was already.

And husky Hunky Svendsen had brought her his buffalo robe because it was cold in New York, and somebody else had brought a pair of moose antlers for no reason at all.

Nate Barlow got on the train with her to ride as far as the tank. And when they got to the tank he kissed her again. "Remember you're to write often, and if you need anything. . . ."

The train was moving again. He was gone. And pretty soon Wahilla was gone, too, lost in the red hills party and his control of the 1944 delegates will be secure, while the election of Mr. Dewey will diminish the Roosevelt strength, because he will be properly blamed for it.

PERHAPS, BEFORE LONG these things will become clearer to the President and, putting aside his understandable pique at having been publicly walloped by the man he had become accustomed to treating as a sort of upper-class family servant or retainer, he will adjust himself to the situation, use his influence with his radical labor friends and get for himself some of the credit for the Bennett election. That would appear to be in the national interests. It would also appear to be in the Roosevelt interests. There is for him no other self-respecting, logical or consistent course and those who are helping keep him from it are not his real friends—far from it.

AS FOR Mr. Farley, win or lose, he has been made into a real national figure. His reputation as a politician has been greatly enhanced, but no more so than his reputation as a man. He has shown that honesty and truthfulness pay in politics as in everything else, and his success has encouraged honest men in public life all over the country. It is extraordinary that a man who had failed to prevent the breaking of the third-term tradition, could stand up in his home State almost alone against the White House offensive and lick it. He beat the President, both New York Senators, the Governor of the State, the Mayor of the city, Adolph Berle, the leaders of Tammany Hall, the chairman of the national committee and the American Labor party—altogether about as formidable a combination as could be conceived. It was a notable victory, the fruits of which are not likely to be spoiled by the disgruntled and defeated.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)
Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church
Almighty and all-loving God our Father, we thank thee for thy love to mankind. We pray that we might be guided through the nights of despair which come to us in this earthly existence. May we never allow suffering to warp our picture of a loving Father; may we never allow pain to dim the picture of love as it is demonstrated in Gethsemane and on the Cross. May the hardships and trials with which we are confronted serve merely to intensify our love to Thee, and to impress upon us our tremendous need for a power higher than our own, which can be supplied only through Jesus Christ our Lord, in Whose Name we pray. Amen.

QUIET HOUR WITH BABY

Now, more than ever, your baby needs to feel a sense of security at home. Psychologists say this need for security exists in direct proportion to the maturity of the individual. Think how enormous is the need of a tiny baby, if this be so, to feel that the world around him is a safe and happy place in which to grow. That he is loved and cherished in a calm contented home.

It's no slight task to keep a placid front these days. Not with all the war talk and the news. Not when we are devoting every spare minute to the Red Cross, to canteen work, and first aid classes. Not when our menfolk are working hard in fields and factories, and doing civil defense duties on the side.

Nevertheless, we women must make a special effort to appear composed and happy in our homes; for even a tiny child can be upset by anxiety and excitement in his mother. A tranquil attitude on mother's part helps preserve baby's stability and mental health, which is, of course, as essential to his physical development as night to day.

In spite of crowded schedules and the excitement of these times, every mother should set aside a certain portion of the day just for playing with her baby. A quiet hour like this will have a soothing effect on her, as well as to reassure her baby of the peace and protection, the love and affection of his home.

Your baby is small and sweet and cuddly for such a tiny time. And he needs so much, this little chap of yours, to feel that home is a haven of security where he can grow into a fine and fearless childhood.

Of course, setting aside several hours each day means mother must take full advantage of the time-saving developments science and industry have devised to simplify her work. Not the least of these benefits, when it comes to bringing up a baby, are the prepared strained foods designed for feeding infants. These foods are made from choice cereals and vegetables and fruits, grown specially for babies, in the finest garden country in the land. They are cooked according to strict laboratory procedure, strained to minute particles sized perfectly for baby's tender digestive tract, and packed in sterilized, enamel-lined cans.

Knowing these truly fine foods, of which her physician has approved, are now available in all our markets, is a great comfort to a mother. And it's an equal comfort to feed them to her child, for all fifteen varieties are fully prepared and ready to be served. She need only open a can, spoon the contents into the top part of a double boiler, heat to lukewarm, and serve.

Using these ready-to-serve foods for her baby will free mother from the tedious, time-consuming task of preparing strained fruits and vegetables at home, and give her extra hours of leisure to enjoy playing with her child.

"TEN GENTLEMEN FROM WEST POINT"

Gen. Martin Winner
In Every Election

The political career of General Edward Martin, Republican candidate for Governor, started in his native Greene county when he was a boy of 14.

"I used to go to the post office and general store at Ten Mile," he recounts today, "and listen to real political wisdom. With the material I picked up overhearing those discussions, I made my first political speech in the schoolhouse, when I was only 14 years old."

The wisdom of those old-timers who weighed the merits of young William Jennings Bryan's free silver plan, and fought out the tobacco and tariff wars of the turn of the century, was deeply implanted in the boy's receptive mind.

Today he often draws upon the storehouse of political knowledge whose accumulation began at that little cross-roads at the close of the 90's.

From that day on, Edward Martin was "in politics." It was in his blood. He loves it. He resents bitterly those who use the word sneeringly, as though it meant something stealthy and under-cover, something to be ashamed of.

"Politics is democracy," he tells them. "When a man takes an interest in his government, he takes an interest in politics. If he doesn't take any interest in his government — then he isn't a very good American, and he doesn't deserve the benefits the signers of the Declaration of Independence and the framers of the Constitution sacrificed to guarantee him. I've always been in politics, and I always will be, and I'm very proud of it."

Edward Martin's first entry into State-wide politics came in 1920, when he was advanced as a candidate for Auditor General. He had, however, been Secretary and Chairman of the Greene County Republican Committee, county solicitor, and a member of the Republican State Committee. Nothing came of the effort to nominate him on the State ticket in 1920, but in 1924 he announced his candidacy for the same office. He was nominated in that hard-fought primary.

After serving a term as Auditor General, Martin became a candidate in 1928 for State Treasurer, and once more was elected, this time by a majority of more than 900,000, to lead the entire ticket.

In his political career of more than 40 years, Edward Martin has never been defeated in an election.

In 1928, Martin also was selected to be Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and in that capacity among his noteworthy achievements was the organization of the Young Republicans of Pennsylvania, a State-wide group of young people whose youth and new ideas the State Chairman saw would do much to revitalize the Republican party in Pennsylvania.

One of Edward Martin's recollections of a life in politics is the State-wide campaign of 1906, in which he used the first motor car for political campaigning. In the wheezy 1906 Rambler, the campaigner covered 72 miles of Greene county roads, securing horses, but getting much attention.

It is Edward Martin's pride that every phase of the administration of State governmental affairs has passed over his desk.

A patriot first, a politician second, and in addition, a student of statecraft and a long-life public servant, Edward Martin by his record of a rise through the ranks has duplicated in public life his distinguished record on the battlefield and in the encampment in four of his nation's wars.

Are you shy, backward, too complacent? Are you lacking in the qualities of which successful business men are made? Do you need a good, loud laugh? . . . Then look up Professor Dwight Dawson, alias Don Ameche, the renowned character builder who co-starred with Henry Fonda and Lynn Bari, will conduct classes at the Grand Theatre starting today in "The Magnificent Dope," new mirthful 20th Century-Fox comedy.

Whoever doubts the efficacy of the course, and its ability in a short space of time to transform "pills" into pillars of society, need only refer to the case of Tad Page (Henry Fonda).

VICTORY FOR EDGELY IN TONIGHT'S GAME WILL END SERIES

Voltz Nine and Edgely Will Meet On St. Ann's Diamond

EDGELY HAS WON TWICE

If Voltz Team Wins the Series Will Go To Five Games

A victory for the Edgely team against the Voltz-Texaco team when the teams meet tonight for the fourth time will close the 1942 season of the Bristol Suburban League. The tilt will be played on St. Ann's field, starting at 6.15 o'clock.

Edgely is one up on the gasoleers, winning the first game, 3-2, and the third game, 4-3. The Voltz-Texaco boys captured the second contest, 3-0. A triumph for the Voltz-men will make a fifth game necessary and this will be conducted by the league with the money received in the collection also going to the league treasury.

Manager George Dougherty, of Voltz, is on the spot as to whom he will start on the mound in the contest. He hasn't used "Kemp" Boccardo in the series and then he has his choice of either "Bill" Gallagher or "Loggie" Bragg.

However, all indications point towards Bragg being in there at the start. Bragg has eight straight mound wins and hasn't been beaten since early in the season. On his last time out last Wednesday night, he blanked the Edgely team to give Voltz its only triumph.

"Bill" Gallagher also pitched well in his game which he won in ten innings, 3-2, but this decision was reversed when the arbitration board decided a protest in the Edgely favor and re-evaluated the score back to the ninth inning to give Edgely the game, 3-2.

It is Ralph Linc's turn to work on the mound for the Edgelyites. Linc opposed Gallagher in the first tilt played and had but one earned run scored against him, errors accounting for the other. The southpaw is in fine shape and may draw the pitching assignment.

The batting of the teams improved in last Sunday's game but it is still very weak. In the total series, Edgely and Voltz have a total of 17 hits. In the total series Mazzillo, Hunter, and Kramers are the only players having more than two hits.

One thing noted in the playoff games is the amount of bunting which is being done by both clubs. They are in there fighting for one run all the time and the total of sacrifices every game prove that the players are doing their utmost to push the base-runners around the bags.

The fielding at times though erratic in the infield has been magnificent for in the pinches the boys are always on their toes. The catching has been up-to-date with Vanzant's arm spoiling several scoring chances of the Voltz team.

term, and it was overwhelmingly decided to have the children go to the William E. Case School.

Ventilation and other unsatisfactory conditions prompted school officials to ask for the vote. It was planned several months ago to erect a new brick structure in place of the two-room wooden one, but war conditions made it impossible to get men and materials.

Miss Helen Pennington and Miss Lois Watkins, Capitol View teachers, will shift to the Case School along with the children. The present frame structure will be used mostly for storage of school equipment.

Imperial Defense Forces and Axis Armored Units Locked In Battle in Egyptian Desert

The new raid against Saarbruecken was termed an "outstanding success," with hundreds of bombers, including some of the heaviest four-engined jobs in Britain's arsenal, participating.

Excellent weather made it easy to see targets clearly, said the announcement, which added that three British bombers failed to return from the raid.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—While the Solomon Islands battle is not yet over it represents the first big step towards an Allied offensive in the Pacific, United States Navy circles in London declared today.

The action by American Marines, aided by United States and Allied naval units, these sources pointed out, embraces the first landing on enemy-held territory and marks the initial holding of territory wrested from the enemy.

Reports available in the British capital, it was said, show that the Marine forces landed apparently are holding their own.

CAIRO, Sept. 2.—(INS)—American bombing and fighting planes operating jointly with the Royal Air Force zoomed over the Egyptian battle area today to blast Axis troop concentrations and supply bases.

Furious shelling and counter-shelling went on uninterruptedly as British and Axis ground forces blasted at their opponent's positions along the 35-mile battlefield extending from west of El Alamein south to the Qattara Depression.

Latest dispatches from the fighting front said the defending Imperial Eighth Army had the situation well in hand following the repulse of two thrusts against the British line by German and Italian armored forces.

The crack of artillery shells mingled with blasts of aerial bombs as both sides opened up hand batteries and sent air forces into action.

Military reports received in Cairo said that the main armored forces of Nazi field marshal Erwin Rommel and the Imperial defenders were not yet engaged in the latest flare-up precipitated by the Axis assaults.

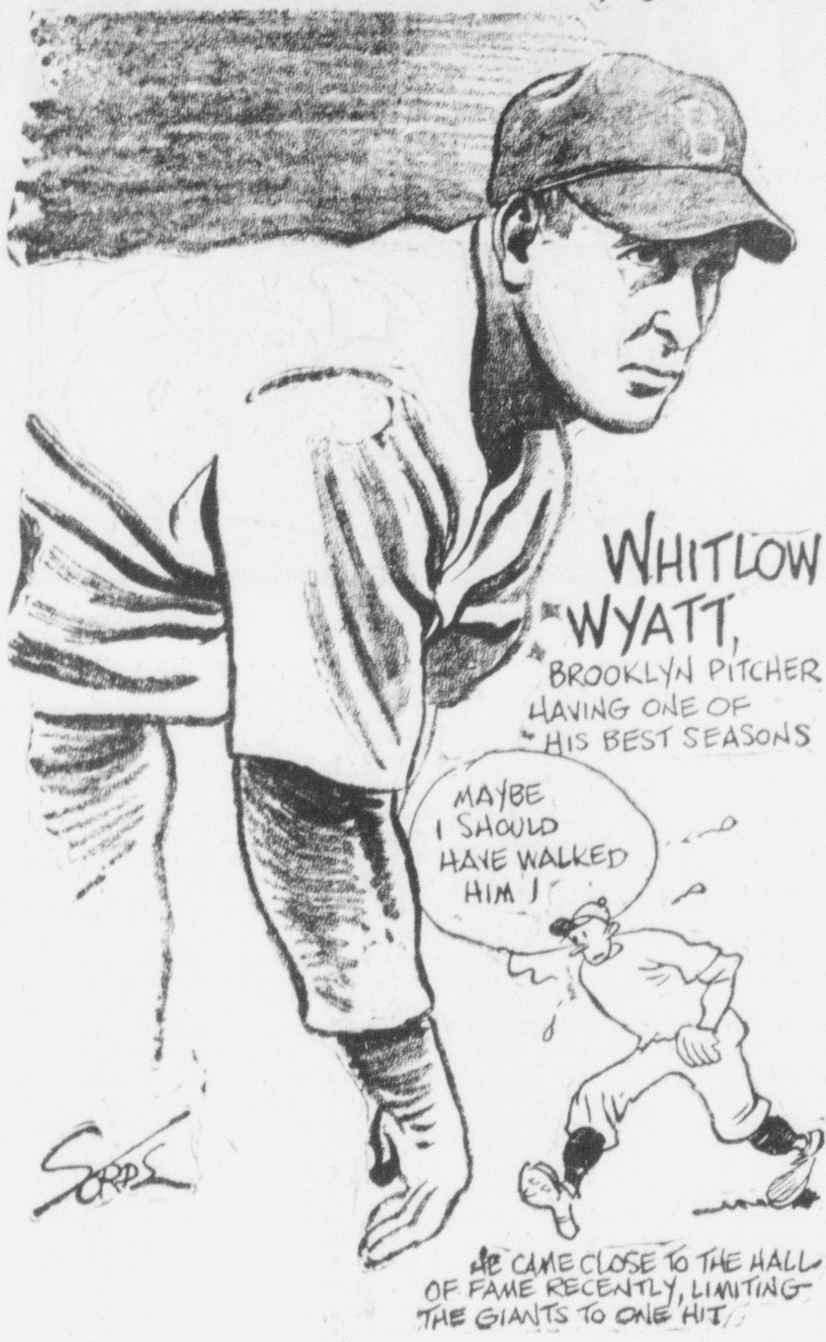

The principal engagement was touched off when Rommel hurled his Panzer units into the El Alamein line in the vicinity of El Heimeimat, 10 miles north of the Qattara salt marshes. Another force attacked near El Ruweisat Ridge.

A strategic withdrawal was made by the British in the El Heimeimat area, giving the Axis a reported temporary gain of about eight miles.

The fighting took on the usual tactics of desert warfare and the active fronts became extremely "fluid" as mechanized units swirled back and forth during the engagement.

Correspondents, under almost constant shellfire and bombing, said that frequently they were not certain whether they were behind their own lines or those of the enemy because of the rapidity of the action. American Mitchell bombers, B-25 twin-motored machines, went into action for the first time in the desert battling to smash heavy blows at Rommel's forces. Fighter squadrons of United States planes also went into battle to accompany American-made and American-manned bombers.

They ranged over the battle area and far behind the lines, attacking air-dromes, transport columns and harbor areas through which Rommel receives supplies.

There is considerable activity by night fighters which strafe the battle area between dusk and sunrise.

THE CAPITOL WHIRL

HARRISBURG, Sept. 2.—(INS)—By International News Service

The State Election Bureau expects that at least two and possibly three third parties will appear on the election ballot in November. . . . They are the Socialist-Labor Party, with Joseph Pirincin, of Pittsburgh, as its candidate for Governor; the Prohibition Party, headed by Dale H. Learn, of East Stroudsburg; and the United Pension Party, with State Sen. John J. Haluska, Democrat, of Patton, as its gubernatorial candidate. . . . The last day for independent parties to withdraw is August 29th. . . . The Socialist-Labor group and the Prohibition Party are expected to stay on the ballot but it is not known definitely whether Haluska will drop out of the race as Democratic State Chairman David L. Lawrence and other party leaders wish.

Independent parties seeking control of the State Government first appeared 137 years ago when Thomas McKean, an Independent Democrat, defeated the regular Democratic Party and wrote in candidates to win the Governor's chair. . . . Third parties, variously named Abolitionists, Native American, and Free Soilers, appeared occasionally on the ballot until 1872 when independent groups became a regular part of the State's election picture. . . . In 18 gubernatorial elections since then, independent groups have sought to overthrow the party in power. . . . The Prohibition Party placed its first gubernatorial candidate, S. B. Chase, on the ballot in 1872 while Labor's first candidate was Thomas A. Armstrong, 10 years later.

Pennsylvania's air raid precaution control center, joining every county control center with Harrisburg, will be completed soon and ready to operate 24 hours a day in case of emergencies. . . . The center, authorized by the State Defense Council, is being established under the direction of Col. Ralph Mitchell, of Harrisburg. . . . When completed, Dr. A. C. Marts, executive director of the Council, will name a commander and various subordinates to man the center and coordinate the work of various citizens' groups. . . . A network of communication lines has been mapped out and State Council officials said necessary equipment will be installed soon.

President Bradley Ardrey called to the attention of the Board the necessity to conserve fuel and light in the school buildings during the coming winter. He suggested that one boiler be operated in the high school building instead of two, except during extreme emergencies. The Property Committee was asked to make a survey of organizations meetings in the building and of the activities held there. It is planned to group all meetings and activities so that the building will be open only two nights a week.

The members of the Board absent were Dr. George Hussey and Mrs. William Harding.

"Fight! Work! and SAVE!"

A War Message on WAR BONDS from the President of the United States

"The American people know that if we would raise the billions which we now need to pay for the war and at the same time prevent a disastrous rise in the cost of living, we shall have to double and more than double the scale of our savings."

"Every dime and dollar not vitally needed for absolute necessities should go into WAR BONDS and STAMPS to add to the striking power of our armed forces."

"If these purchases are to have a material effect in restraining price increases they must be made out of current income."

"In almost every individual case they should be big enough to mean rigid self-denial, a substantial reduction for most of us in the scale of our expenditure that is comfortable and easy for us."

"We cannot fight this war, we cannot exert our maximum effort, on a spend-as-usual basis."

"We cannot have all we want if our soldiers and sailors are to have all they need."
